The Labor-Management Peace Act, 1947

The Labor-Management Peace Act, 1947, which the majority presents to the House Committee on Education and Labor today, is our response to the mandate that the people of the people of the United States gave to us last November.

This mandate was to protect the public from the violence, loss of output, and class hatred due to increasing labor disputes, to protect the workers from political and financial exploitation by union leaders, and to save the American system of free opportunity and free enterprise.

This mandate was given last November not just to the Republicans, but to every man and woman elected to the Eightieth Congress, and we call upon every member of the Eightieth Congress and upon every member of the Federal Government, regardless of party, to respond to the people's mandate, as we do, and to promptly pass the Labor-Management Peace Act, 1947.

The draft that is placed before you does three things:

First, it takes the subject of labor relations out of the area of politics and false premises and places it firmly on the principles implicit in the Constitution of the United States.

Second, it defines the rights of the public, the employee, the union and the employer to the end that industrial disputes may diminish in number and decrease in destructiveness.

Third, it sets up machinery to insure that the new national policy, which recognizes that the public interest is paramount, shall be honestly and efficiently administered.

This Committee has held many weeks of hearings. We have heard scores of witnesses from all parts of the country, from all walks of life, representing all points of view. After hearing all this testimony, we have reached certain conclusions. In many respects they are consistent with findings of our predecessors, who from time to time have recommended important changes in the National Labor Relations Act, a number of which this House has passed by large majorities.

Old Board Abolished

We have found that, while there are a number of important defects in the Labor Act, itself, there are even more in the way the National Labor Relations Board has administered it. We therefore abolish the National Labor Relations Board. We set up in its place a new Board, to be composed of fair and impartial persons. Unlike the old Board, it will not act as prosecutor, judge and jury. Its sole function will be to decide cases. A new and independent officer, the Administrator of the Act, will investigate cases and present the evidence to the new Board, and the new Board must decide the cases, not according to prejudice and caprice, as the old Board so often has done, but according to the facts.

Besides abolishing the old Board, we prevent the new Board from repeating its mistakes. We attempt to do away with practices of certain unions that the Board has condoned and even encouraged, notwithstanding that the practices were against the interests of the public and even against the interests of members of unions and of workers generally. Among these are strikes to compel employers to deprive employees of their rights under the Act, illegal boycotts, violence, mass picketing, industry-wide bargaining, strikes against public health and safety and dictatorial control of workers by unscrupulous union leaders.

We do not undertake in this Bill to punish anyone, employers, employees or unions, for evils that have arisen under the old Act. We undertake to define and protect the rights of those who are concerned in the broad and important field of labor relations. We protect employees against abuses by their unions and by employers. We protect unions against abuses by employers, by employees and by each other. We protect employers against abuses by unions and their members. We attempt to reduce strife and ill will by getting rid of many of their causes, but without impairing the just rights of anyone.

Rights of Workers

Important among the new clauses in the Bill are those that really assure to workers freedom in their organizing and bargaining activities. The old Act purported to do this, but in the Board's hands it often had the opposite effect.

We write into the Act rules for the new Board to follow in setting up units for collective bargaining and in holding elections to determine whether or not employees wish labor unions to bargain for them. These rules do away with practices of the old Board by which it has subjected literally millions of workers to control by labor unions notwithstanding that the employees did not wish the unions to represent them and voted against the unions in the Board's elections. We forbid the new Board to continue the past practice of depriving workers of the right to designate independent unions as their bargaining agents merely because they happened to be independent.

When workers wish a union to represent them, we enable the workers to keep greater control of the union's affairs than, in many cases, they have enjoyed in the past. We protect them against excessive admission fees, fines, dues, and assessments. We give them a voice in deciding upon the important questions, and assure to them the right to speak freely on matters that concern them, and to vote in elections of union officers. We do this in response to pleas of many sincere union people who regard democracy in unions as indispensable to the healthy growth of unionism. On the other hand, we give the union the right to maintain disciplone in its ranks, and to expel members who are disloyal to the union or who act in ways that bring it into disrepute.

The Bill further adds to the freedom of workers by permitting them not only to present grievances to their employers, as the old Board heretofore has permitted them to do, but also to settle the grievances when doing so does not violate the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, which the Board has not allowed.

We require in this bill that unions that undertake to bargain collectively for workers must perform this important duty, and make it an unfair labor practice for unions, as well as for employers, to refuse to bargain collectively. At the same time, we define the procedure of collective bargaining, and set forth the matters on which one side may require the other to bargain with it. We thus limit bargaining to matters of interest to the employer and to the man at work, and forbid the Board, by tests that it never has been able to explain, to determine whether either unions or employers have bargained in "good faith".

By dealing with industry-wide bargaining, we enable the workers to keep closer control of the bargaining in their behalf. Although the Bill permits international officers, executive boards and other officials far removed from the shops to advise and guide the workers, it does not subject the workers to control by the union's central office, as the evidence before us has shown so frequentlyto have been the case.

We forbid employees to pay to unions taxes and exactions such as John L. Lewis and J. Caesar Petrillo have imposed upon the coal industry and the phonograph recording, radio and entertainment industries, instead of paying the money to workers directly as wages. We forbid unions to compel workers to contribute to so-called welfare plans against their will.

We further protect workers against dictatorial conduct by their leaders by requiring secret ballots before strikes, and by making it an unfair labor practice for unions to call strikes without authorization by the employees.

Although the old Labor Act, by its terms, seems to permit employees to petition the Board for decertification of unions that the employees no longer wish to represent them, the Board has denied this right to employees. The Bill restores this right.

Free Speech

Although the old Labor Board often says it does not limit free speech, we know from decisions of the Board itself that it does use what they say against those who exercise the right of free speech. We provide that the new Board may not use against an employer, an employee or a union any statement that is not by its own terms unfair.

Rights of Employers

As in the Case Bill, which passed the House by a vote of more than 2 to 1 last year, we forbid the Board to use its authority to unionize foremen and other representatives of management who act for employers in their dealings with employees and their unions. The evidence before our Committee showed conclusively that so-called "independent" unions of foremen are not independent. The unions of men the foremen supervise control them. They connot be independent. The evidence further shows that management must have in the plants agents who are entirely loyal, just as representatives of the workers must be undivided in their loyalty to the workers.

Equal Responsibility Before the Law

When employers violate rights that the Labor Act gives to employees or to unions, the Board can issue orders against them. When employers violate rights of employees or of unions under other laws, they must answer in court for what they do. Under the present Bill, when unions and their members violate rights that the Bill would give to employers and to employees, the new Board can issue orders protecting the employers and the employees. Thus, if a union refuses to bargain collectively, if it intimidates workers, if it extorts unlawful payments from its members or refuses to conduct its affairs fairly and according to democratic practices, it commits an unfair labor practice and the Board can issue an order against it. The Bill also lists acts for which all other citizens must answer in court, but for which, under existing laws, unions and their leaders and members often escape liability. These acts include violating collective bargaining contracts, violence in strikes, mass picketing, strikes to force employers to violate the Labor Act or other laws. They also include illegal boycotts, sympathy strikes, jurisdictional strikes, featherbedding agreements by which unions and employers seek to restrain trade contrary to the Anti-Trust laws. For all these acts and others like them, unions and their members would lose their rights under the new Labor Act, and persons whom they injure can sue them just as they could sue anyone else.

Industry-Wide Bargaining

This Bill is the first serious attempt to deal with one of our country's greatest and most pressing problems, industry-wide bargaining and industry-wide strikes that paralyze our economy and that imperil the health and safety of our people.

We deal with this problem not only by amending the Act, but also by separate clauses on strikes against public health and safety. By changing the Labor Act we (1) forbid the Board to combine employees of two or more competing employers in one bargaining unit, (2) forbid it to certify one union as the bargaining agent for employees of two or more competing employers, and (3) forbid employees of two or more competing employers to conspire together to strike at the same time. There are two exceptions to these rules. One union can represent less than 100 employees of each of several competing employers if the employers' plants are not more than 50 miles apart. This permits small groups of employees to bargain together and permits small employers to bargain together, but limits the kind of bargaining that so often leads to price fixing and other monopolistic practices. The second exception permits unions that represent employees of competing employers to affiliate or associate together if their bargaining, striking and other concerted activities are not subject to common control. Under this exception, national and international unions would be able to perform for local unions functions like those that trade associations perform for member companies now, but would not be able to dictate to them.

By separate clauses of the Bill, we authorize the Attorney General to ask the courts to enjoin against strikes that imperil the public health and safety, and authorize courts to issue injunctions in such cases, as they did in the recent case of John L. Lewis, without regard to the Norris-LaGuardia Act. Certainly if labor leaders are to have the power to prostrate the country, we must retain in Government, through the Department of Justice and the Federal courts, limited authority to forbid the abuse of such power.

Compulsory Unionism

The Bill bans the closed shop. Under carefully drawn regulations it permits an employer and a union voluntarily to enter into an agreement requiring employees to become and remain members of the union a month or more after the employer hires them or after the agreement is signed. Such agreements are lawful, however, only if the employees by secret ballot have selected the union as their bargaining agent, and if the majority of all the employees, by a separate secret ballot, authorize the union to enter into the agreement, and if the agreement is not prohibited by state law. An employee maybe expelled from the union and thus forced to leave his job only if the expulsion is by reason of his failing to pay fees and dues imposed upon employees generally. Under this clause, employers may select their own employees. Employees have thirty days to decide whether or not to keep their jobs and join the union. Unions may not cause the discharge of employees by discriminating against them. The agreement must be voluntary. Unions may not strike to compel employers to enter into such agreements. They are subject to loss of bargaining rights and to civil penalties if they do so.

Conciliation

The Bill takes the United States Conciliation Service out of the Department of Labor, which Department is now charged by statute with the conflicting duties of representing labor and, at the same time, trying to serve as a mediator. This Bill transfers such conciliation and mediation functions to an impartial agency under a Director of Conciliation and defines his duties.

Miscellaneous

Besides these major reforms, this Bill permits employees, employers and unions that lose in the Board's elections to appeal from the Board's rulings. Under the present Act, as the Board administers it, only employers

ANALYSIS OF PROPOSED TAFT AMENDMENTS TO THE TAFT-HARTLEY ACT

Prepared by

Woll, Glenn & Thatcher, General Counsel,
American Federation of Labor

In connection with the Minority Report of the Senate Labor Committee on the Thomas Bill (S. 249), Senator Taft proposed certain amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act. If a bill were passed embodying these amendments, the result would be nothing but a slightly watered Taft-Hartley Act. The bill would meet some of labor's objections to some of the more obviously offensive provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, but it would still retain all of the Taft-Hartley Act's most objectionable features, namely, the use of injunctions both to curb various union unfair labor practices and to curb so-called "national emergency strikes," the prohibition of closed-shop agreements, the prohibitions on secondary boycotts, and the provisions for damage suits against labor organizations. In one very vital respect - that involving the use of injunctions in national emergency disputes - the Taft amendment is even more objectionable than the Taft-Hartley provisions for the reason that, under the Taft amendment, the President can obtain an injunction at any time, while under the Taft-Hartley Act he can do so only after the Presidential Board has inquired into the dispute and has issued a report.

In respect to injunctions against union unfair labor practices, while the mandatory injunctions against secondary boycotts and jurisdictional strikes contained in Taft-Hartley are eliminated, nevertheless the Board's General Counsel retains complete discretion to seek injunctions against any type of alleged union unfair labor practice, including secondary boycotts, once a complaint has been issued. Since the General Counsel has unlimited discretion to issue compleints, it is clear that, as a practical matter, all of the injunctive dangers of Taft-Hartley are also inherent in the Taft amendments.

The Taft amendment completely prohibits all types of closed-shop agreements where union membership is required prior to or at the time of employment, except that the employer can notify a union of employment opportunities and the union can refer qualified applicants for employment. This last exception is not contained in Taft-Hartley, but without a more specific relaxing of the prohibition against employers employing union members as such, it is difficult to see where the exception would be of any material assistance even in the hiring hall situation which it presumably is designed to meet. Union-shop agreements are permitted as under Taft-Hartley, but the majority authorization election is eliminated, and unions are permitted to require discharge of employees not only for non-payment of dues as under Taft-Hartley, but also for having engaged in a "wild cat" strike or for being affiliated with the Communist Party. However, the Taft-Hartley union-shop de-authorization elections are retained, as well as the provisions in the Taft-Hartley Act making all state anti-closed-shop or anti-union security laws paramount to the federal law.

All of the Taft-Hartley Act's prohibitions on secondary boycotts and jurisdictional strikes are retained, with the one slight exception that a secondary boycott is permitted against work transferred from a struck plant.

Finally, the provisions in the Taft-Hartley Act making unions liable in damage suits for breaches of contract or for violations of the secondary boycott and jurisdictional strike restrictions are retained in full.

The following is a provision-by-provision comparison of the Taft-amendments with the Taft-Hartley Act, showing what, if any, changes are made in respect to each of the twenty main provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. (The comparison follows the same form as that followed in previous analyses prepared by this office comparing the Thomas and Wood Bills with the Taft-Hartley Act.) The following provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act are retained, strengthened, modified or repealed by the Taft amendments as indicated.

1. Disenfranchisement of economic strikers - repealed.

2. Blanket prohibitions on restraint or coercion of employees by unions - retained, except the word "restraint" is eliminated.

3. Broad prohibitions on secondary boycotting - retained, with the minor exception that a union may induce employees in another plant to refrain from working on struck work transferred from a plant where a labor dispute exists.

4. Prohibition against jurisdictional disputes - retained, except that either the Labor Board or an arbitrator appointed by the Board may finally decide the dispute.

5. Ban on closed shop and restriction on union shop - retained in most respects, with the modifications discussed above.

6. Exclusion of "supervisors" from all protection against employer discrimination and refusal to bargain - retained, except definition of "supervisor" slightly relaxed.

7. Proviso permitting employer to use "free" speech to abuse unions if no threat of reprisal - modified by eliminating the prohibition against the use of such statements as evidence of unfair labor practices, but extending the proviso to representation cases.

8. Non-communist affidavit, registration and other filing requirements - retained as to unions, but the form of report is simplified. Employers are likewise obliged to file non-communist or non-fascist affidavits, but are not required to make any reports.

9. Restrictions on excessive initiation fees - retained.

10. Restrictions on "featherbedding" - repealed.

11. Definition of good-faith bargaining - retained.

12. Employer petitions and decertification provisions - retained.

13. Opening of federal courts to damage suits for breaches of contracts and for violation of secondary boycott provisions - retained, with the slight limitation respecting working on struck work discussed above.

14. Restrictions on welfare funds and check-off--retained and enlarged by prohibiting authorizations for check-off of assessments, which is permitted under Taft-Hartley. Welfare fund agreements placed under supervision of Secretary of Labor.

15. Craft unit proviso - retained.

16. Provision for 60-day notice of termination or modification of existing agreement - retained and enlarged to require 60-day notice of reopening, as well as of modification or termination.

17. Separate conciliation service - retained.

18. Provision for enjoining strikes in emergency situations, 80-day "cooling off" period and "last offer" election - as indicated above, substantially retained and even strengthened by permitting President to seek injunction even before the Presidential Board makes its report. The injunction must be dissolved at the end of 60 days. The "last offer" election is eliminated, and the Board is authorized to make recommendations as well as findings of fact. The seizure provisions which the President may invoke as an alternative to injunction, or which may be coupled with an injunction, are very general in terms and do not specify what happens during the period of seizure in respect to the payment of wages or the retention of profits.

19. Restrictions on political contributions by labor organizations - modified to exclude expenditures from the prohibition, but political contributions are still outlawed.

20. Separation of powers as between Board and General Counsel - eliminated.

Conclusion

The foregoing section-by-section comparision of the proposed Taft amendments with the Taft-Hartley Act indicates conclusively that those amendments do not in any substantial or fundamental manner reach the basic objections which labor has consistently raised to the Taft-Hartley Act. All of the major objectionable features of the Taft-Hartley Act are retained, namely, injunctions against union unfair practices and in national emergency disputes, prohibitions on closed-shop agreements, and liability for damages. The concessions that have been made in the Taft proposals do not reach these four fundamental objectionable features; indeed, they do not even meet many of the legitimate objections labor has made to less fundamental provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. The Taft Bill could not, anymore than the Wood Bill, be considered in any way an adequate substitute for the Thomas or Lesinski Bills.

To the Members of
The House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Congressman:

I am making this last appeal to you, in behalf of the millions of members of the American Federation of Labor, to vote against the highly objectionable anti-labor measure recommended for passage by the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Please bear in mind that these millions of workers who will be the victims of this restrictive and oppressive legislation are the same workers who served so patriotically during the recent World War and who produced the airplanes, the ships, the tanks, the guns, and served on the transportation systems of the nation in such a wonderful way in order to win the war. Is this to be their reward? Are they to be punished, oppressed, and their rights and liberties restricted by vindictive, punitive laws?

Please consider this phase of the question for a moment. I cannot help but think if you will do so you will vote against H.R. 3020 as I have herein requested. What is back of it all? Why this drive to weaken labor and subject it to exploitation?

The men and women of Labor here in America who cherish the blessings of freedom and liberty as a common heritage, can not accept or become reconciled to such drastic legislation. No nation under the sun has proposed or considered the adoption of such legislation as this since the close of the war.

This earnest and sincere personal appeal is based upon my knowledge and understanding of the heart and mind of the working people of the nation. In their name and for them I earnestly appeal to you to vote against H.R.3020.

Very sincerely yours,

Wm. Green

Dear President Green:

In response to your letter of March 17 regarding the Anti-Labor measures being acted upon by the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Relations and the House Committee on Education and Labor, I am glad to say that our International Union sent to these Committees copies of the resolution on this subject adopted by our Executive Council at its last session only a few weeks ago. I am enclosing a copy of this resolution for your information.

I am also enclosing a copy of the April edition of our monthly paper, The Textile Challenger, as I know you will be interested in seeing our front page cartoon, on the attitude of Congress towards organized labor, as well as the column by Secretary-Treasurer Lloyd Klenert dealing with this general subject.

RESOLUTION OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL
UNITED TEXTILE WORKERS OF AMERICA

Anti-Labor Legislation

Whereas: Labor-management relations in the Nation have been improving for some time now, as collective bargaining has been substituted for governmental intervention in the field of labor relations; and whereas: the major threat to peaceful labor relations today is the disturbing behavior of certain elements in Congress, who are preparing to push through sweeping legislation to disrupt the normal processes of collective bargaining, to cripple the Trade Union Movement and to re-institute governmental intervention in the field of labor relations;

therefore be it resolved by the Executive Council of the United Textile Workers of America assembled in the City of Washington on February 15 that we urge

(1) that Congress refrain from all anti-labor, punitive legislation which would destroy the Labor Movement or cripple it and which would usher into being a new system of governmental controls under the guise of increasing "free" engerprise;

(2) that Congress avoid all legislation which would increase and stir up industrial conflicts instead of reducing such disputes;

(3) that Congress has a duty to avoid all the evidences of that Toryism, which breeds insecurity and class warfare, and to push forward a program, instead, to promote the welfare

RE: Anti-labor Legislation

Dear President Green:

As indicated in my letter dated March 25, I am enclosing what action the Glass Bottle Blowers Association has taken to date to counteract the anti-labor legislation now pending before Congress.

No doubt, in the very near future, I shall have petitions to which will be attached close to a hundred thousand signatures. I intend to publicize these petitions as much as possible and shall keep you informed of our activities.

The Republican Congress, in my opinion, is making a serious mistake when they infer they have "a mandate" to pass regulatory laws covering labor. I personally have been quite active in the Republican party, at least so far as Pennsylvania is concerned, but I for one most certainly will work against any party or representative of a party who attempts to shackle the forces of labor.

I have been receiving some very good comments on the letter I addressed to all the United States Senators and Representatives, however, of course, the vote on final legislative enactments is what will count.

Let me know if I can cooperate with you and your colleagues any further. I shall be most happy to comply.

Kind personal regards and best wishes.

TO ALL LOCAL UNIONS,

GREETINGS:

On January 15, 1947, a circular was sent to the trade, which set forth the problems that your union and all unions are going to be faced with, That circular also advised that at a later date a petition would be sent to the trade to combat the restrictive proposed legislation now in the U. S. Congress.

Please find attached to this letter a petition that the National Office cannot urge too strongly to be filled out and mailed back to the National Office. I would like to point out that this petition can be signed by anyone, and I respectfully urge that this be done at the earliest possible moment.

Petition

Whereas, the Glass Bottle Blowers Association, affiliated with the A. F. of L., has bargained on an industry-wide basis without a general strike since 1884, thereby establishing a record which is beyond doubt one of outstanding labor relations; and

Whereas, the present Congress is considering legislation which would react unfavorably against this outstanding record of "free enterprise" based on honesty and sincerity; and

Whereas, if adopted, this legistation would create unsurmountable problems affecting this most important segment of our American economy.

Therefore Be It Resolved, that the signers of this Petition urge both our Representatives and Senators to vote against this pending legislation in order to secure for ourselves and families our traditional freedoms of free collective bargaining.

March 28, 1947

(Sent to All U. S. Senators and Representatives)

In 1846, the Glass Bottle Blowers Association was founded and authorized to bargain collectively for its membership in the United States and Canada. This Trade Union recognized its one hundredth anniversary in the year just past.

Since 1885, there has not been a general strike in the glass container industry. Likewise, national bargaining has been carried on since the year 1885 with great success to both the industry and the members of the Glass Blowers' Union.

The glass container industry is one hundred per cent organized under Union Shop Contracts which include all of the advanced thinking in modern labor relations, such as the Check-Off, Seniority, Overtime Protection and many, many other fair labor standards.

During the war years, our industry - through the cooperation of our Union was able to increase production from fifty million (50,000,000) gross in 1940 to one hundred and fifteen million (115,000,000) gross in 1946. We helped immeasurably to keep the general public and our Armed Forces supplied with the necessary containers which protected the health and welfare of our nation. This record is most outstanding and was based on total cooperation and collective bargaining without interference by Governmental Agencies or others who know not the intricate problems confronting the glass industry.

The present Congress has before it a series of labor bills which will not promote industrial peace, but which will retard the progress made by this great nation. Free Enterprise has been the keynote in recent election campaigns. Free Enterprise for whom?

We appeal to the sound thinking citizens who are our Representatives in Congress to vote against legislation which is conceived hurriedly and passed in a spirit of ill will. Our nation economically must move forward and certainly the enactment of anti-labor legislation will contribute much to our present economic standards being lowered.

No. 2 3/28/47

Your vote against this proposed legislation will permit our forty thousand (40,000) members to continue their progress of honesty and sincerity in dealing with our Manufacturers.

Trusting we will have your cooperation,

Sincerely yours,

TO ALL LOCAL UNIONS, GREETINGS:

Our Union and each INDIVIDUAL MEMBER of it is at the present time confronted with one of the most serious problems which we have faced in several decades. At the present time there is legislation before Congress which will set back our Union and INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS fifty (50) years.

The history of our nation will prove that fair legislation is not enacted quickly. Our predecessors in the Trade Union movement fought for many years to obtain the present legislation which protects our job opportunities and our individual welfare. This legislation was not easily enacted, but was obtained only through diligent effort.

I include herewith, copy of a letter sent by this office to all the Representatives and Senators who are now considering this legislation.

Dear Senator:

Electrical Worker's Local Union #574, representing the unanimous opinion of five hundred and fifty (550) employees, is very concerned over the flood of bills proposed by the Administration, which, if passed, will wipe out all of Labor's gains in many years.

Restrictive legislation has never been successful in solving our problems, and we ask that you give very careful consideration of the various bills as to what effect they will have on the best interests of the nation.

We strongly protest the passage of these bills, with particular regards to Closed Shop, amending the N.L.R.B., elimination of the U.S. Conciliation Service, and giving the President power to seize industries which he thinks are essential to public welfare.

We will be watching with keen interst your re-action to these anti-Labor Bills.

Sincerely yours,

MEMORANDUM

To: President Green
From: W. C. Hushing
Date: April 8, 1947

Herewith copy of bill approved by the Republican members of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

It has not been furnished to the Democratic members but I secured a copy last Saturday.

The full committee meets in executive session next Wednesday and there may be some slight changes in the bill.

They plan to promptly report it and begin its consideration on the floor of the House on the 14th.

The minority has requested me to have prepared a minority report on Title III and Mr. Herzog (National Labor Relations Board) and his attorneys are preparing some other portions of the report, particularly that portion dealing with National Labor Relations Board.

I have requested and Mr. Keiser is now preparing our portion of the report.

The minority leader (Lesinski) also requested me to have prepared a thirty minute speech to be delivered by him during debate on the bill and Mr. Shishkin is now engaged in preparing it.

The majority on the Committee have been most secretive in preparing the bill and have had several secret meeting places with a great array of legal talent, statisticians and analysts.

The hearings have been gone through with a fine toothed comb, indexed and cross indexed so everything will be immediately available to our adversaries.

The cost of all this talent has been exceedingly large - almost prohibitive - I am informed.

The following are a few of the high powered attorneys who have aided in drafting the bill:

Theo. R. Iserman of Rathbone, Perry, Kelley & Deye	N.Y. Attorney representing big business
Mr. Cherrie	N.Y. Attorney represents approximately 25 large corporations and other big money interests

Mark Jones — Attorney, home N.J.; offices N.Y., represents Rockefeller and other large financial interests

Wm. Inglis — Attorney, Labor Advisor, represents 25 or 30 large corporations

Although these men may not directly represent the National Association of Manufacturers or National Chamber of Commerce they do all represent firms who belong to these organizations.

Jerry Morgan local attorney made the actual legislative draft of the bill but has no interest either way as he was engaged just to put the bill in final shape.

Please hold this entire matter confidential as I do not want my sources of information dried up.

Dear Sir and Brother:

It has become evident that the 80th Congress knows not what it is doing nor where it is going. The 80th Congress is harboring an illusion believing that the 1946 election results were specifically directed toward the annihilation of the rights of free men.

We believe that the time has come when Labor must make itself heard in the halls of Congress. Appreciating, of course, that your good offices have done everything in their power to bring about a complete understanding as to what is necessary in order to continue our democracy as we know it and enjoy it.

We, of course, are advocates of free enterprise and free labor, but the time has come when the rights of free men are being challenged. We find that today, Big Business, through the National Association of Manufacturers, is drawing strategic battle lines directed explicity against organized Labor. We further find that the National Association of Manufacturers is directing all of its propaganda to the unorganized for consumption. We feel that Labor's first counter-reaction should be in the field of public relations, i.e.: What Labor stands for, its policy and program, its responsibility to our Government, its struggle for existence in elevating the working man's standards which made this country the great country we know it to be.

Since we recognize the most of organized Labor,is, in some way or another, doing its part in trying to eliminate and discourage legislation which is not designed constructively for the betterment of the masses of the people, but which will bring about chaos and complete breakdown of our economic system, the Executive Board of the International Union, United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, in regular session in the city of Milwaukee on March 25, 1947, appeals to you and your offices to put into motion the machinery for a National Legislative Conference to be held as soon as possible in Washington, D. C. All National and International Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor should be invited to attend this conference. The National Conference Committee should request the presence of all of the Representatives of Congress. This National Legislative Conference, in our opinion, could do a splendid public relations job in letting the world know our position with reference to free enterprise, free men, collective bargaining (as we understand it), the rights of people to become members of our Unions and deal collectively with their employers, and the workers struggle in the past in the absence of true collective bargaining, a condition which was deplorable in a democracy, such as ours, prior to the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act.

In our opinion, the reactionaries of Congress could be placed in an indefensible position by refusing to participate in a National Legislative Conference of this kind.

In our opinion, the time has come when we must "talk plain facts" to our Representatives and not pull any punches. We are firm believers in the fact that if we are going to enjoy industrial peace, the people of this nation will write that peace and not Congress or the National Association of Manufacturers.

The Executive Board of the International Union, United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is thoroughly convinced that a National Legislative Conference called by you, through your offices, is imperative and will again put the American Federation of Labor out in front with their policy of sound thinking, sound planning, and truly advocating the American spirit of progress.

Sincerely and fraternally,

Lester Washburn

Study Slated on Strike Bill

in a booming base state at super- Many employes married 15 s switchboards.

Without Sleep

"I haven't seen a pillow since 7 o'clock Sunday morning," said one tired supervisory employe work- ing in double harness.

Both sides claimed gains in their ranks among the employes. A company spokesman said em- ployes continue to "trickle" back to work. H. A. Cross, president of the Nebraska division of the NUTW, said the union has signed "quite a few" new members since the strike began at 6 a. m. Mon- day.

Omaha is the headquarters for organization work in a territory that includes Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri, as well as a small area in Colorado.

Picketing a Lark

Despite rain Monday night, pickets continued to pace at the Telephone Building and at the two exchange offices in Omaha. The union said women and girl pickets will not be used at night.

The strike was a new experience for the telephone workers. For many girl operators, picketing was a lark. Their hobby sox were little protection against the biting wind at Nineteenth and Douglas Streets.

"They'll wear slacks," said Mr. Cross.

The Nebraska president of the union said that the organization will see the strikers who need money help get it. Some of the money will come from a credit union fund, he said.

No Compensation

Pickets may not claim compen- sation under Nebraska law, the Omaha office of the Nebraska State Employment Service said. Nor can state jobless pay go to

The Omaha branch also used radio transmission from Fort Omaha.

The power district, like hydro- electric districts in Nebraska, has its own telephone transmission lines, said General Manager J. E. Davidson. The lines are used in dispatching power.

Vertical Union

On strike with the NUTW are the American Association of Tele- phone Workers, Long Lines, the Association of Communication Employes, Western Electric Company Employes, the National Association of Telephone Workers, Inside Employes, Traffic Employes, Plant Employes, Clerical Employes, Equipment Installers, Equipment Repairmen, Cable Splicers and Cable Splicers' Helpers.

Chief Robert Mutch issued a gen- eral order to police officers to be on the alert for strike trouble. He posted an officer at the Tele- phone Building. Other officers were stationed at the Kenwood and Market exchanges and at the telephone company's garage.

Market and Kenwood telephone users were advised by a recording that only emergency calls would be put through.

The device, known as the mirro- phone, consists of a tape record- ing on which a woman operator repeats:

Operate Alarm Systems

"I am sorry but, due to the strike, I am able to complete only emergency calls at this time. If your call is an emergency call, flash your switch hook, please. This is a recorded message.

By agreement with the com- pany, the union provided forces for the police and fire alarm sys- tems and heating of the buildings.

The Labor Committee [illegible] agreed to continue holding it until after the hearing on the Gener- ors bill.

Governor Peterson, in his mes- sage on the new bill, said it is neither management nor labor. He said:

New Phone Plan Is Offered; Hearing Set on Strike Ban

Public to Tell View on Plan

Legislative Committee Opposes Placing of Bill in Earlier One

By Jane Keogh

A public hearing on Gov. Val Peterson's new bill to outlaw strikes to isolate it public utility or governmental service will be held by the Legislature's Labor Committee next Monday.

That date was set Monday morning by Senator Karl Vogel, Omaha, chairman, and members of the committee.

The committee gave brief consideration to placing the bill's terms in a court of industrial relations, in which there has already been a public hearing. That would have put off for committee action for some time. The bill can be brought out immediately after the hearing.

Would Prevent Lockouts

LB 547, the Governor's measure, was introduced Monday morning by Senator John McKnight, Auburn. Governor Peterson requested its introduction because of the telephone strike.

It would prevent strikes by employes of any public utility or of the state, counties, cities or any other governmental subdivision. It would prevent lockouts of such employes by management.

Labor disputes between governmental or public utility employes and management would go to a court of industrial relations for settlement.

Minimum penalty for violating the new law would be a fine of $10 or five days in jail. Penalties would range up to a maximum of a fine of one thousand dollars plus one year's imprisonment.

Would Bar Strike Funds

In setting the anti-strike, anti-lockout policy, the bill states: "... shall be unlawful for any ... conspire with, or encourage ... any person to interfere by lockout, strike, slowdown, or other interruption, with the operation of any governmental service or the service of any public utility, and (2) to aid any such lockout, strike, slowdown, or other interruption of any governmental service or public utility by giving direction or guidance in the conduct of such interruption, or by providing funds for the conduct or direction thereof, or for the payment of strike, unemployment or other benefits to those participating therein."

Worker Could Quit

However, the bill gives an employe of a governmental subdivision or a public utility a right to quit his job. It states:

"No individual shall be deemed to have violated this act by reason only of his having ceased to work or having refused to continue to work or to accept employment."

The bill defines "public utility" as:

"Any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business trust, or any other organized group of persons, which carry on an intra-state business in this state and over which the Government of the United States has not assumed exclusive regulation and control, that furnishes transportation for hire, telephone service, telegraph service, electric light, heat and power service or any one or more thereof, gas for heating or illuminating, whether natural or artificial, water service, or any other service or commodity directly affecting the living conditions of this state, the discontinuance of continuity of which would impose hardship and suffering upon the public."

Proposes $6,000 Salaries

There would be three judges on the court of industrial relations. They would be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms. Their salary would be six thousand dollars a year each.

The bill asserts that the judges "shall not be appointed because they are representatives of capital or labor, but they shall be appointed because of their experience and knowledge in legal, financial and industrial matters."

It would be a court of record. It would have the power to issue summons and subpoenas for persons, books, records and correspondence involved in labor disputes.

Permits Appeals

The court could set wages and working conditions, but these would have to conform to wages and working conditions prevailing [illegible] fields of endeavor in

May Be Based on Agreement in Long Lines

After a 31-hour conference with Bell System union and company representatives, mediators said "good progress" had been made toward settlement of the day-old strike.

After the three-way conference broke up, it was announced that President Joseph Beirne of the striking National Federation of Telephone Workers, and members of his 45-man policy committee would meet with Federal Conciliation Chief Edgar L. Warren later in the night.

Formula Ready

[illegible] coal mines employing 54 thousand members of the United Mine Workers, operated Monday.

Preliminary estimates showed that more than 1,200 mines, including those manned by non-union and Progressive Union miners as well as United Mine Workers, operated and produced 723 thousand tons. An estimated 100 thousand men were involved in that production.

The CMA said tonnage was approximately 32 per cent of the total normal daily production of soft coal.

The CMA said 54 thousand United Mine Workers "ignored orders of union officials to remain away from all bituminous coal mines in the possession of the Federal Government pending inspection by safety inspectors of the United States Bureau of Mines."

Certificates Sought

"The mines operating Monday included many large mines in Government possession which had submitted safety compliance certificates from the local union's mine safety committee and the operating manager, in accordance with CMA orders.

Navy Capt. N. H. Collisson, Coal Mines Administrator, last Thursday listed 518 such mines in Government possession as involving "imminent danger."

United States operating managers of the two thousand other mines in Government possession were ordered to review safety conditions and to certify their mines were not unduly hazardous before resuming operation.

Captain Collisson said late Monday nine hundred certificates in both categories had been received and were being tabulated.

He said Bureau of Mines inspectors are being dispatched promptly to mines where reinspection is deemed necessary.

198,000 Are Idle

Pittsburgh (Pa.) reports showed about 198 thousand idle in 10 states; West Virginia, top producer; Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, Alabama, Virginia, Indiana, Utah, Montana and New Mexico.

A substantial majority of Pennsylvania's 101 thousand soft coal miners were idle, but both the Solid Fuels Administration and the Navy Coal Mine Administration declined to fix an idleness figure there. Their production figures, however, estimated Monday's output at about 25 per cent of normal. This figure included strip mining, not affected by the mine union's safety drive.

Pennsylvania's anthracite mines in the eastern section of the state also were closed, as hard coal diggers prolonged their Easter holiday through Easter Monday.

Steel Production Drops

Coal-related industry was quick to feel the effect of the stoppage which continued past the six-day "mourning period" decreed last week by UMW Boss John L. Lewis to memorialize the Centralia (Ill.) mine blast dead.

United States Steel announced further curtailment, raising to the equivalent of eight blast furnaces the reductions effected since the "mourning period" began. Curtailments Monday were the equivalent of 2½ blast furnaces.

A steel spokesman said the production loss would be about seven thousand tons of pig iron, 20 per cent of the normal output.

All of United States Steel's 16 captive mines in the Pittsburgh district were down. These pits produced about 60 thousand tons daily, supplying most of the firm's coal needs.

Coal car movement in the Pennsylvania Railroad's Pittsburgh division dropped from 26 thousand cars per week to an anticipated [illegible] thousand.

Air Charter Months Away

Prairie's Application Is Still Held Up

Chances that Prairie Airways, Inc., of Alliance, Neb., will receive a Federal charter were shoved into the dim future Monday.

Francis Brown, chief examiner for the C[illegible] said that the application of Prairie for a Federally certified airline between Casper, Wyo., and Kansas City, Mo., "may" receive a hearing "within the next few months."

The original application was filed with CAB by the Alliance firm a little more than three years ago. The amended application, which lopped off five projected routes ranging from Alaska to Florida, was tacked onto the original April 4, 1947.

As for a completely new move by the Nebraska airline for Federal approval of a Scottsbluff-Omaha airline, Mr. Brown declared he did not figure this request would come before a board of examiners "for ages."

Despite a "what's slowing up the works" letter from the Scottsbluff Chamber of Commerce and numerous communications from Harry E. Gantz, general counsel for the 250 thousand dollar airline, it appeared that CAB officials are still minded to take their time about a hearing for Nebraska.

The delay, according to one CAB official, occurs because CAB examiners try to hear all applications at once for extended lines over a common territory.

This source declared that Prairie can operate an intrastate line in Nebraska without Federal approval—but also without Federal mail subsidies.

Senate Sets Time on Lilienthal Vote

Washington (AP)—The Se[illegible] agreed Monday to vote at 5 p. m. Wednesday on the question of confirming David E. Lilienthal and other nominees to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Senator Hickenlooper (Rep., Ia.), chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, obtained unanimous consent on the voting time.

Senator M[illegible]ellar (D., Tenn.), leader [illegible] the anti-Lilienthal forces, sat silent as Mr. Hickenlooper made the request.

A test vote last Thursday took the fight out of the opposition and foreshadowed confirmation. The Senate refused at that time, 52 to 38, to send the nominations back to Mr. Hickenlooper's committee for an FBI check.

Up for confirmation along with Mr. Lilienthal are Robert F. Bacher, L. L. Strauss, W. W. Waymack and Sumner T. Pike, nominees for commissioner, and Carroll L. Wilson, general manager.

U. S., Mexico Sharing Disease Fight Costs

Washington (AP)—The Agriculture Department, in its first report on the campaign against foot-and-mouth disease in Mexico, Monday told Congress the United States and Mexico are sharing expenses almost equally.

The Mexican Government expects to spend $9,350,000 by June 30. The report said $1,750,000 of this is to be paid in indemnities for animals destroyed in infected areas. The nine million dollars available as this country's share also is to last until June 30.

Several new areas of infection have been discovered, but none is any closer to the United States border than older areas.

Horse bettors got their race results as usual Monday afternoon despite the telephone strike, Omaha bookie operators said.

There was no delay in the transmission of the winners.

One bookmaker said there was [illegible] by long distance telephone lines, but said bookmakers had not been told they might not be able to get results as the strike progresses.

Levee Broken, Flood Passes

River Rising Slowly at Nebraska City

The crest of Missouri River flood waters moved slowly downstream from Omaha Monday night, leaving this area comparatively undamaged.

About three thousand acres of Iowa farm land were flooded Monday when the Uttman Levee between Modale and California, Ia., broke. The Army Engineers reported eight persons moved off the land ahead of the water. The breach in the levee was 30 feet wide.

Monday evening the Missouri was rising slowly at Nebraska City, where the reading was 17.1 feet. Flood stage is 15 feet. The reading at Brownville, south of Nebraska City, was 17.3 feet, with flood stage 15 feet.

Below Prediction

At Rulo, Neb., near the Kansas border, the 6 p. m. level was 17 feet.

The swollen Big Muddy failed to reach a predicted level of 18 feet here. Its top mark Monday morning was 17.8, more than a foot below the flood stage of 19 feet.

The river began falling at the Florence Pumping Station Monday morning and at the Douglas Street Bridge shortly after noon.

Snow will continue to provide a variation to April showers in the eastern half of the state today, the Weather Bureau said.

Fog Reported

Snow fell Monday night at North Platte, Grand Island, Valentine and Norfolk. Grand Island and North Platte had measured .23 of an inch of precipitation during the six hours ended at 6 p. m. Valentine had received .34 of an inch, Norfolk .18, Omaha .05, Lincoln .03 and Hayes Center .02. Omaha and Lincoln had early evening rain showers, while fog was reported at Hayes Center.

Western Nebraska had the edge on warmth during the day. High temperatures included Scottsbluff 52, Sidney 50, Omaha 47, Norfolk and Lincoln 44, Grand Island 37, Valentine 36, Hayes Center 34 and North Platte 32.

'Gaping Holes' in Road at Holdrege Reported

McCook, Neb. (AP)—Residents served by Highway 6-34 from Holdrege west were reported Monday to be protesting a dangerous condition on the road.

The oil mat highway was said to have broken up since the frost went out of the ground. Motorists said the highway is pock-marked with "gaping holes."

Numerous civic organizations, including the McCook Chamber of Commerce, have written State Engineer Wardner Scott urging immediate repair.

President Truman remained silent. His aids said seizure of the far-flung Bell system lines is not planned at this time, although Attorney General Clark has ruled that the President can do so under the Federal Communications Act.

The Government appeared to be concentrating for an agreement among long distance workers and American Telephone and Telegraph Company in hope that any settlement terms could become the basis for settlements throughout the strike-bound Bell System.

An agreement in the long lines segment of the industry prevented a telephone strike a year ago.

325,000 Employes Out

Some 325 thousand telephone workers went on strike Monday [illegible] It was the nation's first coast-to-coast walkout in the telephone industry.

Most seriously affected were long distance lines and local non-dial service. Supervisory employes and non-strikers were handling emergency calls.

Unaffected were dial phones, which serve about 60 per cent of the users. Leased wire services to press and radio continued in operation.

New Jersey, Indiana and Virginia have statutory powers to seize utilities in event of strike. Only New Jersey invoked its law. Workers in the other two states remained on the job.

Defy State's Seizure

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll seized the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company facilities and ordered 24 thousand strikers to go back to work. Union leaders, however, refused to issue a back-to-work order.

In Omaha, E. H. Ries of the United States Conciliation Service said he has been unable to bring the company and the leaders of the four striking unions together.

The unions, he added, will not agree to further bargaining talks until the company submits another offer. The company has made no new offer, he said.

"Both sides have their eyes on what is being done in Washington," said the conciliator.

Fewer Calls

Sandwich board placards worn by pickets declared the walkout was a national strike. The four unions, of which the 16 thousand member Northwestern Union of Telephone Workers is the largest, are affiliated with the National Federation of Telephone Workers.

The firm said that fewer calls are being made in the five-state area. Employes who walked through picket lines and supervisory personnel, the company

Dear Sir and Brother:

Enclosed, please find communication which I propose to send to all Nebraska Senators and Congressmen; and which communication I would appreciate your comments on before sending it in.

I realize you are a very busy man, but I do not want to do or say anything in this letter that would be detrimental to the fight that the American Federation of Labor is waging there in Washington against this anti-labor legislation.

Fraternally yours,

P. S. Also, enclose, please find news clipping which is self-explanatory and will give you some idea of the Governor's request for anti-strike legislation and its coverage, due to the telephone strike. I would appreciate having Padway's comments on this at your earliest convenience.

As President of the Grand Island Central Labor Union and First Vice-President of the Nebraska State Federation of Labor, I have been asked by the Grand Island Central Labor Union and the Grand Island Building and Construction Trades Council and their affiliated unions to write you stating our position on labor legislation now pending before Congress and to urge your support in the defeat of same.

Beginning first with the closed shop. We feel that Congress would be committing a serious and grave mistake and be playing right into the hands of big business if they were to outlaw the closed shop provision in collective bargaining agreements. First, we contend that a ban of closed shop is unconstitutional, because it prevents freedom of contract and infringes on the democratic rights as guaranteed our people by the constitution of the United States; and last but not least, the Supreme Court has already upheld the validity of the closed shop.

The closed or union shop is nothing more than the democratic principle on which our very country was founded. Big business and anti-labor groups; yes, and some anti-labor Congressmen, would have Congress and the people of this country believe that the closed or union shop denies employment except to union members. This is purely propaganda and is without foundation. As you know, the American Federation of Labor and its affiliates are constantly seeking new membership; and the tremendous growth of membership in the American Federation of Labor in the past few years is proof of this statement.

To outlaw the closed or union shop, a provision as old as organized labor itself, means the return to sweat shops, it means the exploitation of union members, reduction of wages and finally complete collapse of our economy in this country. Such proposal is not constructive. It is punitive -- designed by those who have no interest in the welfare of the working man and by those who either do not know, or who do not care, about the chaos that this would create. This type of legislation is not going to cure strikes, it is not going to mean harmony between management and labor; but in our opinion, will eventually lead to more industrial strife and will disrupt the good relationship between the employer and the union which now exist.

It is true that some individual states have banned the closed shop, and it is true that our own state has adopted a constitutional amendment outlawing the closed shop; but surveys and testimonies convince us that the National Association of Manufacturers and their affiliates are behind this and have so cleverly covered up their real motives and so cleverly worded their proposals to outlaw the closed shop in these states that the people have been completely deceived.

Organized labor, and I am sure that you will agree with me, has made some wonderful contributions toward our economic and social standards in this country. Organized labor, and I am sure that you will agree with me, has made some wonderful contributions toward our economic and social standards in this country. We feel that they have been able to make these contributions because the closed shop provision in our agreements, which provides union security, has made it possible for labor to lend ort to social needs in this country. Honest and sincere employers e no quarrel with the closed or union shop because they know that rst, it means harmony in their establishment; secondly, it means source of supply, and last but not least, it means that as a general rule, the employer is going to be supplied with able and competent workers because, and statistics will prove this, most of the skilled and competent workers of this nation are members of organized labor.

Outlawing the closed or union shop will mean disruption of needed production because it will immediately open the door for the invasion by the C. I. O., which we do not want; and which we believe as a whole, management does not want because we believe like most of the country that the C. I. O. is dominated by Communists.

Naturally, of course, there are those, and they are in a small minority, who object to joining the union and those who object to paying their share of the cost to maintain decent wages and working conditions and job security. Surely, you will recognize that they are the same people who object to paying the grocer, doctor, and their taxes. The closed shop does not deny these people employment, it simply provides that if they want to enjoy the conditions and benefits provided by the union, they must pay their share of maintaining same -- the same as they must pay their taxes if they want to share in the benefits provided by this country and its various communities.

I am sure that you also recognize the fact that the closed or union shop, as practied by the unions in this country is not nearly as strict as the closed shop maintained by the medical, bar, and employer associations. Therefore, we feel that to outlaw the closed shop provision in labor contracts would be nothing more than class legislation, penalizing labor while allowing other classes to practice the same thing. We urge your support in defeating same.

Now with reference to the outlawing of industry-wide contracts. Labor, as well as management, with the exception of a few industries, is opposed to this legislation -- and they have every right to be. While I recognize that we have had some costly strikes on industry-wide basis, I am frank to say that I do not think these would have come about if Grovernment would have left management and labor alone to iron out their own problems. In many instances, industry-wide agreements have been the only protection afforded to small Local Unions against the exploitation of workers practiced by some employers in some industries. On the other hand, industry-wide agreements have meant stabilized wage rates, harmonious relations, and sound and expedient negotiations. It has meant the establishment of machinery to settle disputes in a particular industry in an orderly and peaceful manner.

Despite the costly strikes in the coal and steel industry, that still is no justification, in our opinion, to outlaw industry-wide agreements. Management in both of these industries, and I should include the telephone industry, in my opinion, took an obstinate stand in their negotiations because they felt that the Government would step in and, so to speak, black-jack the workers into submission, or draft legislation favorable to their cause. And, again I want to the Government would maintain a hands-off policy in labor-management affairs, more sincere collective bargaining would result, and industrial strife. Employers in all industries maintain their rights to organize and bargain collectively for an entire industry. Therefore, it is totally unfair and unwise to restrict labor, unless Congress also restricts the activities of the livestock, real estate, manufacturing, construction, and other industries.

We, of labor, do not like strikes because they are costly both to the management and labor; but we do not agree that punitive legislation designed to penalize the union and their members while management is given a free rein is the answer. There is much more that could be said on these two bills and others pending, but time and space won't permit, however, I would like to express our sentiments on the disgraceful action Congress is following in reducing appropriations for labor agencies. It would appear to me that Congress does not have the courage to face the wrath of labor by an outright repeal of the National Labor Relations Act, which, of course, is what big business wants, and the elimination of the conciliation service; so is thereby destroying the effect and activities of those two agencies by cutting down their appropriations.

We are advised that the House has already passed and sent to the Senate House Roll 2700 which cuts nearly thirteen million dollars off the appropriation requested for the Department of Labor. The National Labor Relations Board, despite the fact that it has a large back-log of cases and that it is seriously understaffed, has suffered a reduction of 10% in the funds appropriated for the fiscal year of 1947. I am wondering if you realize what this means. Anti-union employers are having a field day insofar as the National Labor Relations Board is concerned. They are literally thumbing their nose at the National Labor Relations Board and the Unions; and frankly, if the Senate passes H. R. 2700, I predict that Labor will cease to take their representation problems to the labor relations board and go back to the procedure used prior to the enactment of the Wagner Act; and certainly no one could honestly blame them.

We are advised that if this thirteen million dollars is cut from the appropriations requested for the Department of Labor, 102 key positions in the Conciliation Service will have to be abolished because of the failure of Congress to provide funds. These positions include the Director of Conciliation Service, Chiefs of Branch Offices, Regional Directors, Assistant Regional Directors, and other high-ranking employees of this service. It would seem to me that Congress, through their shameful tactics, is trying to create chaos between labor and management, rather than promote harmony. While I agree that the labor conciliation service has it ills, nevertheless, the facts are that numerous strikes have been averted because of this service.

The facts also show that an overwhelming majority of the workers of this nation are choosing the unions for representation which increases the need for additional appropriations for the N. L. R. B. rather than a cut in appropriations. In view of these facts, it would seem to me that a lot of Congressmen are going to have an awful time justifying their position in the eyes of labor if these bills pass. And, in closing, I want to say that, I believe, Congress is at the cross roads. We can have constructive labor legislation and peaceful labor-management relations, or they can pass this punitive legislation and continue to cripple the labor department by the shameful acts of ing appropriations to prevent effectiveness -- all of which result in a knock-down drag out between labor and management.

In any event, Congress will have to answer to thepeople of this nation for their actions; and I don't believe the people of this nation are going to be happy if this punitive labor legislation is passed, which will set us back both socially and economically fifty years. It further indicates that our Congressmen are playing too much politics rather than devoting their efforts to the problems confronting this nation.

We respectfully urge your support in defeat of these measures discussed in this communication.

Respectfully yours,

E. F. Noble, President

Dear Sir & Brother:

In reply to your letter of March 17, please be advised that our Union has held 3 separate General meetings forthe purpose of discussing and formulating a program in opposition to pending Anti-Labor Legislation.

Bros. William Collins, Regional Director of the A.F. of L., James Quinn & Moe Rosen of the Central Trades & Labor Council and William Welpert of the United Hebrew Trades, addressed these meetings.

As a result the following program was agreed upon and put into effect:-

1-Each Officer & Executive Board member of our Union has written both Senators and his respective Congressman a personal message urging them to vigorously oppose and bring about the defeat of all Anti-Labor Legislation.

2-Supplied members with the names of Senators & Congressmen together with the Districts they represent.

3-Supplied members with sample message to be written individually and the post cards upon which such message was to be written.

4-Had Shop Stewards pick up these cards when they had been written to insure mailing.

As a result of this program we are pleased to report that several thousand post cards have been mailed.

TO ALL ALPA CHAIRMEN AND OFFICERS

Dear Member:

Attached is a copy of a letter from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor. Please read this at your next council meeting.

The following part of Mr. Green's letter is interesting and, to say the least, extremely distressing:

> ".....On the other hand, very few communications are received from labor or labor's friends in opposition to the enactment of said legislation."

Unless Congress receives a great deal more material from the workers of the country, opposing the present ill-conceived, hysterical move against the rights of labor generally, great harm will be done.

Every ALPA member should send a night letter telegram or air mail letter to his Congressman and in strong, clean-cut terms oppose the adoption of any measures against the fundamental rights of the working people to organize and bargain collectively for purposes of protecting and improving their rates of compensation and conditions of employment. A long, involved letter or wire is not necessary. Something like the following will suffice:

> "I am taking the liberty of writing to you as one of your constituents. While the working people in your district are prone to not say very much, they are watching with keen interest your attitude and actions on the present ill-considered move against the rights of labor in this country generally.
> "To take away the collective bargaining prerogatives of labor, and the other meager gains they have managed to obtain through years of struggle and sacrifice will do great harm to the nation generally and to the fundamental rights of one of the most important groups of citizens of our country -- the group that produces our goods and keeps the wheels of commerce in motion.

TO THE OFFICERS OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL UNIONS, STATE FEDERATIONS OF LABOR, CITY CENTRAL BODIES AND DIRECTLY AFFILIATED LOCAL UNIONS.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

The Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare and the House Committee on Education and Labor have concluded hearings upon anti-labor measures introduced into the Congress of the United States. The important anti-labor measures referred to provide that,

Union-shop agreements will be eliminated
Industry-wide bargaining will be eliminated
Strikes in jurisdictional disputes will be prohibited
Strikes in certain cases will be prohibited, and a cooling-off period of from 30 days to six months is provided before a strike is permitted.
Secondary boycotts will be prohibited
Foremen will be prohibited from belonging to unions
The National Labor Relations Act will be drastically amended
The United States Conciliation Service will be revised or abolished
The President will be empowered to seize industries essential to public welfare, as the mines were seized under War Powers.

These anti-labor measures are against you. If passed, they will limit your freedom and liberty, weaken your unions, making them less effective, and subject them to court prosecution.

The representatives of Labor appeared before the Committees of Congress in opposition to the enactment of these proposed measures into law. Strong, convincing argument was presented by representatives of the American Federation of Labor in opposition to this proposed legislation, to the committees of both Houses of Congress. Notwithstanding this fact, the indications are that a majority of the Members of Congress seem to be in favor of the enactment of highly objectionable anti-labor legislation.

For this reason I deem it my duty to bring the situation to your attention, with the request that the officers and all members of the American Federation of Labor and all their friends communicate with their representatives in the Congress of the United States immediately, protesting against the enactment of these anti-labor measures and appealing to them to vote against them.

I am advised by Members of Congress that many of them receive telegrams and letters in large volume from their constituents who favor the enactment of anti-labor legislation. On the other hand, very few communications are received from labor or labor's friends in opposition to the enactment of said legislation.

This ought to be prevented. Labor and its friends, numbering from sixty million to eighty million people, ought to shower the Members of Congress with letters and telegrams in opposition to the enactment of these vicious anti-labor measures. There are sufficient members of organized labor and their friends to do this. It ought to be done and you can do it.

We will fight here in Washington with all the power at our command against the enactment of this anti-labor legislation. I call upon you to join with us, to fight with us, to do what I know you can do in a most convincing and effective way - shower the Members of Congress with letters, telegrams and communications appealing to them in the name of labor, freedom, liberty and justice to vote against the vicious anti-labor measures now pending in Congress.

Please respond to this request immediately. The time for action is here because, with the hearings on these anti-labor measures concluded, votes will be taken upon said measures very soon.

Act immediately, without a moment's unnecessary delay. Write or wire your representative in Congress as I have herein requested. Call upon all your friends to do likewise.

Fraternally yours,

Dear Mr. Green:

I wish to acknowledge receipt of your April 10th letter which discusses our activities against the Anti-labor Legislation. I wish to thank you for your kind remarks in behalf of my colleagues and myself.

I have one other idea which I would like your counsel on. I have a signed Petition some two hundred feet (200') long which carries the signatures of roughly fifteen thousand (15,000) people from all walks of life. It was my intention to send this Petition to Senator Howard Taft during the discussion on Labor Bills. However, if you think it proper, I could forward the Petition to you, in order that it could be handed to Mr. Taft personally, thereby getting some publicity. I would appreciate your comments on this matter.

Kind personal regards.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I deeply appreciate the information submitted in your letter dated April 2nd and I am grateful to you for the decisive action you have taken in an effort to prevail upon the membership of the Glass Bottle Blowers Association to communicate in an impressive way with the Members of Congress appealing to them to oppose and vote against anti-labor legislation. Your action in this particular matter will have a most wholesome effect. I have found from my association with Members of Congress that they are susceptible to telegrams, letters, postal cards and telephone calls from their constituents. When our workers manifest a deep interest in action taken by Members of Congress on legislation affecting their interests, it influences many Members of Congress to modify their position.

Be assured if I can think of any other way by which you can help us in this tremendous fight we are making to prevent the enactment of anti-labor legislation by the Congress of the United States, I will call upon you and ask you for further help.

I hope and trust you are enjoying good health and all is going well with you.

Very truly yours,
