U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
DIVISION OF LABOR STANDARDS
WASHINGTON

9/11/47
Mr. Steelman

September 10, 1947

Dear Sir:

Attached is a list of State mediation and conciliation authorities which has been compiled by the Division of Labor Standards to fill the many requests from employers and labor for guidance in meeting the requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act to notify State mediation agencies simultaneously with Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service of disputes over the termination or modification of existing collective bargaining contracts covering employees in industries affecting commerce. This material has been cleared with the States concerned.

Very truly yours,

William L. Connolly

LIST OF STATE MEDIATION AGENCIES COMPILED

A list of mediation and conciliation authorities in 37 States and 3 Territories has been compiled by the Division of Labor Standards, U. S. Department of Labor, William L. Connolly, director, announced today. These will guide unions and management in meeting requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act to notify State mediation agencies simultaneously with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service of disputes over the termination or modification of existing collective bargaining contracts covering employees in an industry affecting commerce.

"Under the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947," Mr. Connolly explained, "either party to such a contract proposing termination or change therein must notify the other party 60 days prior to the time that the proposal would take effect. If a dispute arising over such a proposal is not settled within 30 days, then the Act requires that the State mediation agency in the State in which the dispute occurs must be notified of its existence simultaneously with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. In general strikes and lockouts are forbidden during the entire 60-day notice period."

Many requests have been received by the Labor Department from management and union representatives for such a list of appropriate State mediation agencies, Mr. Connolly stated. Great variation exists among the States, he said, in constituting such agencies. For example, some have established State mediation boards by statute while others ...k State labor commissioners the authority in basic acts to intervene in certain industrial disputes. In still other States, the Governor or other official may authorize intervention. It is to facilitate the proper notification of State agencies by parties in dispute over changes in existing contracts that this preliminary list was compiled by the Division of Labor Standards, which is the Labor Department's channel for promoting close Federal-State cooperation.

The Division also has in preparation a State by State summary of the powers of State mediation agencies. The names and addresses of State authorities having functions in the field of mediation and conciliation of labor disputes follows:

Restrictions on Unions Voted by Many States

Closed Shop Barred in 13 States; Other Laws Limit Utility Strikes

By Gerard D. Reilly

The feature over the passage of the Taft-Hartley Act has tended to obscure the fact that Congress was by no means unique among legislative bodies this year in responding to the widespread public demand for greater regulation of industrial relations. Legislatures in 13 States were also alert to the shortcomings of existing law in that field.

Many of these States are attempts to piecemeal fashion to correct abuses of which Congress also took cognizance, i.e., secondary boycotts, jurisdictional strikes and mass picketing. When the Legislatures had adjourned, the closed shop had been barred in 15 States and permitted only when subject to employe ratification in three others.

The most important type of State legislation, however (since the subject matter was not dealt with by Congress), consists of laws limiting the right to strike in public utilities. Such laws were passed in 11 jurisdictions. The list includes such highly industrialized States as Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Michigan, as well as Virginia, Wisconsin, Indiana, Missouri, Texas, Florida and Nebraska. Ten of these enactments provide for Government seizure or compulsory arbitration, or both. The less-elaborate Texas act merely forbids disrupting utility services by picketing.

As this legislation was vigorously opposed by organized labor, the application of any of these laws is certain to mean that their constitutionality will be challenged in the courts. The most serious question is whether or not they are in conflict with Federal law. This is a matter which Congress settled on the union shop issue by stating that the Taft-Hartley Act should not be construed as giving effect to agreements requiring union membership as a condition of employment in States where such contracts are illegal.

* * * *

Indications are that the litigation over these State enactments will also present three other constitutional questions:

1. Insofar as they restrict striking, do they conflict with the 13th amendment which forbids involuntary servitude?

2. Where they provide for compulsory arbitration, do they conflict with the due process clause in the 14th amendment?

3. Where they restrict picketing, do they conflict with the guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of assembly in the first and 14th amendments?

It is unlikely that the courts will find a conflict between the statutes and the Constitution on any of these points. The right to strike is not guaranteed by the Constitution, although a Federal district judge in the recent Petrillo case seemed to think that it was. In considering an indictment under the Lea Act, he held that since the 13th amendment prevented an individual from being compelled to continue his job against his will, a statute restricting the right to quit work collectively was also repugnant to this clause. The Supreme Court rejected this novel reasoning, however, when it reversed his decision and sustained the Lea Act.

Taft Hartley

It is true that there is an old decision of the Supreme Court—never entirely overruled—invalidating compulsory arbitration by State law. This is the Wolff case holding the power of the Kansas Industrial relations court contrary to the due process clause. One of the theories on which this decision turned, however—interference with liberty of contract—has been repudiated by the minimum-wage and price-fixing cases in recent years. The other ground of the decision—lack of showing of public interest—could scarcely be urged in a utility case. The rates of most essential utility services are now regulated by State commissions. Obviously there is little difference between rate regulation of such companies and legislation providing for the determination of the wages paid by such companies when labor disputes arise.

On the speech issue, these statutes are questionable only if construed as forbidding peaceful picketing. It has been held that this is an aspect of free speech which a State cannot take away, either by police regulation or injunction. With the exception of the Texas statute, however, the prohibitions in the State laws are confined to mass picketing, obstructing entrances to plants or highways and picketing of private homes. Such statutes have been held by the Supreme Court in a recent case, Hill vs. Florida, as a proper exercise of State power, because the objective is to prevent breaches of the peace.

* * * *

The only major problem, therefore, concerns the applicability of these laws to utilities, the operations of which affect interstate commerce. The mere fact that a utility has a State franchise and is subject to State control of its rates does not mean that it is free of Federal regulation in labor matters. The Supreme Court has held that electric light companies which supply power to railroads and factories producing goods for interstate markets were covered by the Wagner Act—which means, of course, that they also fall within the Taft-Hartley Act, which amended it. The same doctrine has been applied to local traction companies which carry workers to interstate plants.

The provisions in the State laws which forbid strikes in such utilities, therefore, will probably have rough sledding in the courts, for, except under specified conditions, concerted activity by workers is protected by the Taft-Hartley Act.

The State laws which seem to have the best chance of surviving in the courts are those of Missouri, New Jersey, Virginia and Massachusetts. The Taft-Hartley Act has no application to employes of the Federal, State or municipal governments.

In these four States their acts were drawn so that the restriction on striking becomes effective only after seizure of the utility system by the State. Last fall the Supreme Court, in the United Mine Workers' case, held that while the mines were in the possession of the Government the miners were public employes.

This would indicate that employes of a utility company being operated temporarily by the State become State employes. If this is their status, they are not entitled to the protection of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Dear sir and Laborer:

I have in my possession a paper that was published Wed. June 25, 1947 at Watts Okl. This paper states that a certain Church Convention has elected a President therof. And this paper states that this President is a COMMUNIST and the Convention thereof is COMMUNIST. So if this paper is true about fifteen-million are communist.

I am planning on sending this paper to you free of charge so that you can see for yourself as I have some labor papers with your name thereon as a write up against the Taft, Hartley Scab Labor Bill I received some time ago from the Railway Labor Executives' Association. This paper would be very good to throw into the anti-labor cliques face.

I am a member of organized labor and have been for about twenty-years and I am doing all that I can for labor and against the Taft. Hartley anti-labor bill sponsored by these anti-labor desperados.

Hoping that you will keep all news very confidently as to this letter.

Fraternally yours,

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Brown.

Dear Sir and Brother;

The Oklahoma State Council of Carpenters have just completed their thirty-seventh annual convention at McAlester Oklahoma September 10 1947. and among other things done was to go on record as having meetings every two months at which meetings it is expected to have representatives of each affiliated local union, it was thought desirable that a number of copies of the Taft-Hartly Bill would be available to these representatives.

Will you please tell me where we can secure sixty(60) copies of this bill, (Public Law 101) ?

The following changes in the Laws of the council were recommended:

Section 2, Article 3, to read as follows: "The Secretary-Treasurer shall have the direct supervision over the Organizer." Change last paragraph to provide that the Secretary shall make a written monthly report to the Executive Committee.

Section 20, Article 3, change the word "President" to "Secretary-Treasurer". The salary and expense of the Organizer shall be set by the Executive Committee.

Section 21, Article 3. He shall make a written report weekly to each Executive Committee member. Said reports shall be filed for record.

All meetings were held in the Ballroom of the Aldridge Hotel.

This brief account of the proceedings is sent to each delegate to aid him in his report to his respective local Union. As you know, this was written in haste and is not complete and there may be some errors. When the complete proceedings are printed, you will be furnished a copy of the same for your records.

Speeches were made by C. Plowboy Edwards, State Representative, Pittsburg County; Hon. J. D. McCarty, Representative, Oklahoma County; R. E. Roberts, General Executive Board Member, Fifth District, U.B. of C. & J.; A. Leo Ketch, representing the Federal Apprentice Training Service; J. Bennett Jones, the same service; Earl McDonald, Secretary, New Mexico State Federation of Labor, and brother of Dick McDonald.

I trust that you enjoyed the convention and feel as I do, that much good was accomplished for the Carpenters of the State.

With best wishes, and hoping to meet each of you at the six meetings of the Project Committee and at the next convention in September, 1948, I am,

Dear Sir and Brother:

Our supply of copies of the Taft-Hartley Act is exhausted as we have only a few copies for our files. I am, however, sending you five copies with a like number of roll call votes with the suggestion that you communicate with the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for additional copies.

The American Federation of Labor has had so many calls that we find it impossible to furnish them in such large numbers, although our affiliates were each furnished one copy and also a copy of the roll call votes.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

AFL to Vote Kitty of 2 Millions To Beat Labor Act Supporters

By Drew Pearson

A two-million-dollar kitty will be voted at the San Francisco convention of the American Federation of Labor October 6 to launch the AFL's campaign to defeat members of Congress who supported the Taft-Hartley labor bill.

Question troubling AFL leaders is how to spend the money without violating the Taft-Hartley Act which prohibits a labor union from using union dues for political activity. Here is how AFL moguls plan to do it.

The two million dollars will be spent in a so-called press and radio "educational program" to acequaint the American public with the great strides made by labor and industry under the Wagner Act, now supplanted by the restrictive Taft-Hartley Act.

Meanwhile, augmenting this national publicity drive, the AFL will send speakers into the districts of every Congressman who supported the Taft-Hartley bill to stump against him for reelection. The expenses of these stump speakers will be financed entirely by voluntary collections taken up at meetings where the speakers appear.

States Army Intelligence report gives startling details of the Communist plan to seize Italy. For some time, United States Intelligence agents have been working to ferret out the underground network of Communists which the Russians have carefully planted to take over Italy at the appropriate time. Presumably this would be when United States troops are withdrawn—on December 15—and when the Italian food and fue crisis reaches the winter clim
